I. About the Department

The Department of Political Science is a premier seat of learning and centre of knowledge production in India. The Department provides academic leadership to the single largest fraternity of students, scholars and faculty doing Political Science in the country. It enjoys an exceptional reputation in both teaching and research in the discipline. The Department was established in 1952, with about 40 postgraduate students. Since then the strength of the students has gone beyond 800.

The growth of the Department has coincided with the progress of the discipline of Political Science from a narrow body of legal and institutional knowledge to more comprehensive social sciences discipline that integrates and interrogates sociological, economic, philosophical and cultural dimensions and thereby better relates to a purposive study of politics, especially keeping Indian realities in focus.

The Department has been granted the Centre for Advanced Studies status by University Grants Commission since 2005. It was first granted a Special Assistance Programme by the UGC in 1999. On its completion in 2004, it was elevated to Centre for Advanced Studies status and currently it's in the third stage of this grant. Over the years, the Department has used this opportunity to do extensive new research, create new syllabi at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels, build an impressive Departmental library and network with a large number of national and international scholars through conferences and workshops.

The Department provides a platform for a wide array of research endeavours ranging from national and international projects, international collaborations, University’s CAS-SAP Programme, Conferences, Seminars and Workshops both at the national and international level to Research Networks/groups. The Department is undertaking extensive research in varied thrust areas including Globalization, Justice and Democracy; Democracy, Norms and Institutions; Social Inclusion/Exclusion, Representation and Discriminatory Practices; Nyaya-Global Justice and Global Poverty; Cultures of Governance and Conflict Resolution; Federalism: Institutions and Processes among others.

The wide ranging international collaborations of the Department highlight its continuing endeavours toward providing opportunities to its students and faculty to engage with fellow scholars across the world. Some of the Department's key international collaborations since 2010 include: Exchange by Promoting Quality Education Research and Training in South and South East Asia Program (EXPERTS), U21 Teaching Program, Nyaya-Global Justice Program, Continuity and Change in Federalism, Role of Governance in Resolution of Socio-Economic and Political Conflict in India and Europe and System of Relatedness, Culture and Vulnerability in Transition: Dalit Life Worlds in Post-Liberalized India.

One of the unique features of the Department is its research networks. The Department acts as an umbrella for numerous and varied research networks across and through disciplines and sub-disciplines. Each group consists of both researchers and faculty members from the Department of Political Science and other constituent colleges of Delhi University. These groups facilitate sharing of research findings by organizing conferences and workshops in collaboration with different national and international institutions. The ongoing research networks include: Intellectual History Research Group (IHRG), Comparative Federalists Research Group (CFRG), Global Justice Research Group (GJRC), Modern South Asian Thinkers, Peace and Security in International Politics Research Network (PSIP), Feminist Engagements with Law and the State (FELS), Southeast Asia Research Group (SEARG), Research Network on Modern South Asian Thinkers (MSAT), Comparative Political Theory Research Group (CPTRG).

1.1 About the Programme:

The Masters Degree Programme of the Department continues to be among the most sought after and one of the most prestigious programmes being run in the country. Each year, the Department receives a significant number of applications for its Masters programme. It is only after a very rigorous admission regimen that the best out of them are able to secure admission. The acceptance rate of applications into the Department’s MA program stands at 1/17.

The Masters programme aims to impart, through core and elective courses, both foundational as well as advanced knowledge to the students in the discipline of Political Science. The coursework covers the entire spectrum of six sub-disciplines of Political Science including Political Theory, Indian Political Thought, International Relations, Comparative Politics, Indian Politics and Public Administration.

1.2 About the Process of Course Development Involving Diverse Stakeholders

The Department has followed the duly prescribed process in a systematic manner for preparing the curriculum of the Masters CBCS Program. These included the following steps:

(i) Revision of courses: The program was discussed at length in Departmental Council (DC) meetings starting from the second week of April going through the entire period of the summer break. The DC agreed to constitute six teams inviting faculty of each of six sub-disciplines in the first instance, deliberated among themselves about the core papers before bringing them to the DC for further deliberations. At the same time faculty members consulted each other for drafting a group of IDC courses including a paper on Research Methods in Social Sciences. In addition, the faculty members took the initiative of drafting individual elective papers and open elective papers and all the six sub-disciplines. The faculty members held as many as 18 brainstorming sessions to discuss the proposed papers in details incorporating various suggestions made by colleagues and revising the paper in light of the feedback received as part of such deliberations.

(ii) Syllabus Uploaded on Website for Wider Review: The draft courses by the faculty members were simultaneously uploaded on the Departmental website to receive feedback from a large body of stakeholders.

(iii) External Peer Review of Revised Courses: The DC also collectively deliberated over the peer review process and members of the of the DC collectively deliberated over the peer review process and formed a potential group of reviewers for each sub-discipline as well as open elective papers. The Head of the Department had then sent each paper to a set of three external reviewers and alumina’s. After that, the faculty members responded to the valuable feedback received and made changes wherever deemed appropriate/necessary which in turn strengthened the faculty’s endeavour to produce the final syllabi.

(iv) Committee of Courses (CoC): After receiving the feedback from all the above mentioned sources, the faculty members made appropriate changes and papers were finally put for discussions in the CoC. Two meetings, each one daylong, of the CoC were held and papers were discussed among the members of CoC which was also attended by faculty members of the Department as special invitee (in case they are not constituent members of the CoC). A detailed discussion of course structure and the syllabi was extensively deliberated, suggestions were made which were finally incorporated to be placed before the Faculty of Social Sciences for its approval.

II. Introduction to Choice Based Credit System (CBCS)

The Choice Based Credit System (CBCS) provides an opportunity for the students to choose courses from the prescribed courses comprising core, elective and open-electives or skill-based courses. The courses can be evaluated following the grading system, which is considered to be better than the conventional marks system. Grading system provides uniformity in the evaluation and computation of the Cumulative Grade Point Average (CGPA) based on student’s performance in examinations which enables the student to move across institutions of higher learning. The uniformity in evaluation system also enables the potential employers in assessing the performance of the candidates.

Definitions:

- ‘Academic Programme’ means an entire course of study comprising its programme structure, course details, evaluation schemes etc. designed to be taught and evaluated in a teaching Department/Centre or jointly under more than one such Department/ Centre.
- ‘Course’ means a segment of a subject that is part of an Academic Programme.
- ‘Programme Structure’ means a list of courses (Core, Elective, Open Elective) that makes up an Academic Programme, specifying the syllabus, Credits, hours of teaching, evaluation and examination schemes, minimum number of credits required for successful completion of the programme etc. prepared in conformity to University Rules, eligibility criteria for admission.
- ‘Core Course’ means a course that a student admitted to a particular programme must successfully complete to receive the degree and which cannot be substituted by any other course. For the Department of Political Science, this includes both core sub-disciplinary courses drawn from Political Theory, Comparative Politics, International Relations, Indian Politics, Indian Political Thought and Public Administration.
- ‘Elective Course’ means an optional course to be selected by a student out of such courses offered in the same or any other Department/Centre
- ‘Open Elective’ means an elective course which is available for students of Masters programmes of other disciplines in the University of Delhi. Students of other Department will opt these courses subject to fulfilling of eligibility of criteria as laid down by the Department offering the course.
- ‘Credit’ means the value assigned to a course which indicates the level of instruction;
- One-hour lecture per week equals 1 Credit, 2 hours tutorial class per week equals 1 credit. Credit for a practical could be proposed as part of a course or as a separate practical course.
- ‘SGPA’ means Semester Grade Point Average calculated for individual semester.
- ‘CGPA’ is Cumulative Grade Points Average calculated for all courses completed by the students at any point of time. CGPA is calculated each year for both the semesters clubbed together.
- ‘Grand CGPA’ is calculated in the last year of the course by clubbing together of CGPA of two years, i.e., four semesters. Grand CGPA is being given in Transcript form. To benefit the student a formula for conversation of Grand CGPA into %age marks is given in the Transcript.

III. M.A. POLITICAL SCIENCE PROGRAMME:

VISION
Shaping the foundations of the way the discipline of Political Science is understood and taught in India, imbued with a distinctive focus on contributions of the Indian scholarship in understanding our complex and diverse social realities. We are committed to advance education and academic research that fosters possibilities of intellectual and social transformation of our students and prepares them to become citizen leaders committed to values of social and gender justice and public service.

PROGRAMME OBJECTIVES (POs):

a) To impart education and training in all the varied sub-disciplines of Political Science including Political Theory, Indian Political Thought, International Relations, Comparative Politics, Indian Politics and Public Administration;
b) To enable students develop critical thinking and enhance their communication and analytical skills through a variety of methods ranging from textual analyses, experiential learning and use of statistical data;
c) To help students develop knowledge, skills, attitudes and values appropriate for the overall civic and cultural development of our society.
d) To enable students to apply theoretical knowledge for understanding the practical domains of Indian politics, international relations and public policy.
e) To facilitate an interdisciplinary approach for better understanding and engagement with India’s social problems, inclusions/exclusions, situations and issues of development.

PROGRAMME STRUCTURE:

The M.A in Political Science programme is a two-year course divided into four semesters. A student is required to complete 80 credits for the completion of course and the award of degree.

Master of Arts in Political Science
Semester I
PS-C 101: Debates in Political Theory

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course proposes to build on a prior understanding of the nature and value of theoretical inquiry in politics. Political theory begins with a few fundamental questions that have a bearing on the good life, and the ways in which we seek to collectively secure it. It does not claim to have any final answers to such questions and instead acknowledges disagreements. Our basic disagreements on how we must constitute our collective life are part of our evaluations that we make on a continual basis of the political and social order we inhabit. Evaluation usually entails an intense engagement with the political context within which we live, the nature of our values and political institutions, their clarification and analyses, together with weighing the necessity of just institutions and values. The activity of evaluation lays bare a wide range of arguments that are used in political discourse sharpening thereby our political judgment. It is imperative to evaluate, argue and judge and then raise for the consideration of justification our existing or appropriate political practices, decisions, policies and institutions.

Course Learning Outcomes:

After reading the course, the learner would:

- Understand the various traditions and approaches of political theory and appreciate how they get reflected in organizing social living Understand multiple frames by which the idea of political community is debated
- Understand the significance of theorizing and of applying theory into practice.
- Appreciate how these values and concepts enrich the discourses of political life, sharpening their analytical skills in the process.

PS-E 03: Themes in Citizenship

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course intends to explore the contests over citizenship to show how citizenship unfolds in state practices, is experienced differentially by people across caste, class, religion and gender, and the expressions of citizenship that emerge from marginalised locations. It places these within the broader debates on citizenship, and the contemporary contexts within which some of the earlier relationships between the nation-state, state, and, citizenship have become unsettled.

Course Learning Outcomes:

The course will help the students revisit the earlier debates on citizenship, by studying citizenship in the contemporary context, particularly the plural political and social cultures of citizenship and its practices in different locations.

Contents:

Unit I. Conceptual frameworks: citizenship and social class, group-differentiated citizenship, multicultural citizenship, civil society and citizenship

Unit II. Nation, state-formation and citizenship: law and liminality

Unit III. Differentiated citizenship: caste, gender, sexuality, religion

Unit IV. Globalisation and citizenship: mutations, flexible citizenship, dual citizenship

Unit V. Security, surveillance and suspect citizenship

Unit VI. Citizenship performances: global street, politics of the governed, citizen democracy, insurgent citizenship

PS-E 14: Social Conservatism in India

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

India is a society where social conservatives have often passed off as anti-colonial and hence 'radical' - for example, sections of the Swadeshi movement. Opposing the colonial state and its intervention was part of defending the 'inner private/spiritual domain', a domain which also included 'women' and 'home' or domesticity. This had another consequence: the supposedly underdeveloped free market conservatism, partly expressed in the Swantantra Party, which never really took off. Often ignored, this crucial dimension and its impact in political life will be explored in this course. This course intends to bring together different strands of conservative thought across the political spectrum.

Course Learning Outcomes:

To explore various manifestations of conservatism across the political spectrum in India and evaluate them on the basis of contemporary political issues.

Contents:

Unit I: Edmund Burke and conservative political thought

Unit II: Anti-colonial Hindu revivalism
   a) Bankim Chatterji
   b) Tilak and karma-yoga

Unit III: Religion
   a) 'Way of life': Dharma
   b) Rationalist: Ambedkar's Navayana

Unit IV: Atheism and rationalism as socio-political critique

Unit V: Communists and Hindu social order

Unit VI: Free market anti-statism:
   a) Minoo Masani and the Swatantra Party
   b) Rajaji and Indian conservative thought

PS-E 15: Social Exclusion: Theory and Practice

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

Social exclusion is a process that deprives individuals as well as groups from their due share in an unequal social order. Social categories of exclusion have become heterogeneous over the years. No longer are class and caste the only social cleavages. Issues like religion, gender, alternative sexuality have occupied an important space in the debates on exclusion. In these circumstances it becomes imperative to study, understand and explain social exclusion in its various dimensions. No linear understanding will do justice to the process of explaining exclusion. What is required is an understanding of the intersection of various social categories and their interdependence on each other. The purpose of introducing this paper to students is to familiarize them with the concept of social exclusion having dimensions ranging from the social to the political, economic and cultural. This paper would also look critically at the exclusion located of time and space.

Course Learning Outcomes:

To equip students in critically understanding multifaceted dimensions of social exclusion practised in the Indian society.

Contents:

- Unit I: Social Exclusion: Theoretical Premises
  a) Origin, Concept, Dimensions
  b) Theories, Debates
  c) Issues and Challenges

- Unit II: Dimensions of Social Exclusion in India

PS-E 17: Gender in International Relations

Credits: 5

Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course introduces the students to gender ‘in’ International Relations. Its aim is not only to make them understand how IR has been constituted and sustained by a number of so-called ‘hegemonic’ masculinities’ and how these particular gendered constructions of a sovereign state, nationalism, security and militarism impact on the lives of particular groups of men and women, but, more importantly, to evaluate the specific contribution that feminist critiques have made as part of the ‘Critical Turn’ in IR.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course will equip students to develop an understanding of how women are made invisible from the very conceptual underpinnings of International Relations and, how masculinity is naturalized and normalized in the practices of its core concepts such as state, sovereignty, power and security. By the end of this course the students would not only be able to problematize the masculine concepts, learn to de-code the gendered language of IR and its practices but also explore alternative paradigms.

Contents:

Unit I: What’s at Stake? The Nature of the Debate

Unit II: Gendered Concepts of IR
  a. Sovereignty
  b. Security
  c. Power

Unit III: Hegemonic Masculinities: State & Nationalism

Unit IV: Militarization of Women’s Lives

PS-E 23: The Modern State in Comparative Perspective

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course focuses on studying the state in its historically specific forms and conceptual variations. It would focus on the debates on the modern state, state formation, practices of rule, and regime types. The purpose is to make the students familiar with the debates on the nature of the state, and the ways in which the state may be studied. The state can be studied as a conceptual variable, and states may be understood to have been historically emergent and also specific. Gender, class and race, constitute the social base of state and are relevant especially as analytical frameworks for understanding how the state and practices of rule are experienced.

Course Learning Outcomes:

The outcome of the course is envisaged in terms of providing students the conceptual tools and theoretical frameworks with which they can make sense of the forms in which the modern state makes itself manifest globally in the contemporary context.

Contents:

Unit I: Studying the State: concept, definition and debate
Unit II: Capitalist State
Unit III: State Formation: European, Colonial and Post-Colonial State
Unit IV: Governmentality, Welfare and Biometric State
Unit V: Security, Surveillance and State of Exception

PS-E 26: Constitutionalism in Comparative Perspective

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:
This course intends to expose students to the multitudinous and differentiated forms of constitutional practices. Distinguishing between constitutions as historical texts and constitutionalism as ideological sites which justify specific constitutional theory and practices, the course will attempt to familiarise students with the pluralities of these sites, and their diverse manifestations. The course encourages students to ask questions such as, what is a constitution, what are the processes through which constitutions evolve, and what are the different underlying principles they pledge, what rights are incorporated in the constitutions and what are the implications of their incorporation are constitutions static/stagnant or do they embody principles of transformative change? For adequate responses to these questions, the course takes the students along the diverse historical experiences of constitutional development and their forms, their relationship with culture and democracy, the notion of transformative constitutionalism in societies transitioning from colonial to postcolonial constitutionalism or from authoritarianism to democracy, and the debates around emergency, states of exception and constitutionalism.

Course Learning Outcomes:
This course will help students understand the working of the constitution, processes through which constitutions evolve, and different underlying principles they pledge.

PS-E 27: The State in Diverse Political Traditions

Credits: 5

Course Objectives:
States and state formation is a historical phenomenon. States have existed in diverse forms and even the ‘modular’ state-form of the European tradition has had plural trajectories. Debates on the modern state, however, continue to be influenced by the dominant western European intellectual tradition. This course aims at making the students familiar with the diverse forms in which historically states have existed and evolved. These historical forms will be studied through the specific ways in which political authority has taken form in different contexts, and also through the ways in which it understood and expressed in different socio-cultural and political traditions.

Course Learning Outcomes:
This course attempts to sensitise students to diverse political traditions of the state so that they can develop a comprehensive view of the state by locating it within the specific social and cultural political traditions.

Contents:

Unit I: State as an analytical category
Unit II: European
Unit III: Chinese
Unit IV: Arab Unit V: African Unit VI: Latin American

PS-E 30: The Politics of Identity in Comparative Perspective

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course examines different theoretical approaches to, and dimensions of, the politics of identity. Focusing, in particular, on societies that experienced colonial rule, it explores how the colonial intervention shaped identities, and moulded the patterns of identity-based mobilization that unfolded over the colonial era and postcolonial phase. It examines the politics of nationhood, and its intersection with the politics of race, caste, religion, and gender, and the efforts made by postcolonial states to deal with cultural difference and conflict, and historically deep ascriptive inequalities. Identities are shaped not merely by state processes, but also by mobilization undertaken by parties and movements, often in response to state processes themselves; the course traces the interaction between identities and this mobilizational politics. Finally, it explores how identity politics has impacted various facets of the process of democratization in postcolonial societies.

Course Learning Outcomes:

To study how identities are shaped not merely by state processes, but also by mobilization undertaken by parties and movements, often in response to state processes themselves.

Contents:

Unit I. Identity: Theoretical Approaches
(a) Identity as primordial attachment, strategic choice and outcome of political processes

Unit II. Identities and the Nation
(a) Anti-colonial nationalisms
(b) The nation’s engagement with race, caste, religion, and gender
(c) Whose nation? Nation-making and the politics of exclusion

Unit III. Identities and the Colonial State
(a) Colonial rule, group identities and group conflict

Unit IV. Identities and the Postcolonial State
(a) The legal and institutional treatment of cultural diversity: language, religion and tribe
(b) State policy and ascriptive inequalities: caste and race
(c) Between individual and community, between tradition and modernity: identities and the postcolonial constitution
Unit V. Identities, Political Mobilization and Conflict
(a) Political mobilization and social cleavages: when do social cleavages assume political salience, and why
(b) Identities and political parties
(c) Identities and social movements
(d) Identity politics and collective violence

VI. Identities and the Question of Democracy
(a) Identity politics, democratic deepening and democratic stability

PS-E 32: Identities and Political Transformation in India

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course explores various facets of the politics of identity in India. It analyses the consequences of colonial rule for identity-formation, and colonialism’s shaping of the identity-based conflicts that were to later emerge in the postcolonial phase. It examines how the politics of nationalism affected, and was itself affected by, the politics of caste, class, religion and gender. It probes the efforts made by the postcolonial state to deal with cultural difference and conflict, and historically deep ascriptive inequalities, focusing specifically on the legal and institutional innovations adopted in this regard. Identities are moulded not just by state processes, but also by political mobilization undertaken in electoral arenas and outside; the course thus explores the interaction between identities on the one hand, and movement and party politics on the other. Also looking at the relationship between identity politics and collective violence, it ends with a focus on globalization, and the consequences it has had for caste- and class-based politics in India.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course would allow for a comprehensive grasp of how historical processes have shaped identity politics in the postcolonial period, and of how identities have been shaped both by state and non-state processes in postcolonial India.

Contents:

Unit I: Identities and Colonial Rule
  a. Colonialism, caste, tribe and religion

Unit II: The National Movement, Partition and Identity Politics
  a. Indian nationalism and the question of caste
  b. Women and the nationalist movement

PS-E 36: Law, Crime, and Politics in India

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

In this course, the aim is to understand the relationship between law, crime, judicial interventions and political processes. The students will explore this relationship by asking questions about law’s origins (viz., the colonial state, a nationalist elite, popular struggles), the plural sites in which struggles around laws takes place, and the manner in which legal categories are produced and contested. In this context, it also aims to problematize the notion of crime, by locating the historical and political contexts within which definitions of crime and its transformations take place. Specific laws, judgments which enhance the frontiers of law, and government reports form a significant content of the course. Law and judicial pronouncements have to be woven into the dynamics of Indian politics and examined in their specific historical context as well as for their enduring significance in the larger political process. The course will identify in particular, the social and political forces, political and ideological divides that frame the contours of the debates on crime and law, and the relationships between the governmental institutions.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course presents intricate relationship between law, crime, judicial intervention.

Contents:

Unit I. Law, crime and colonialism
Unit II. The Constitution and rule of law
Unit III. Criminal justice system in India
Unit IV. Crimes against women: sexual harassment and rape
Unit V. Custodial crimes: death, rape and torture

PS-E 42: Collaborative Governance: Transforming Engagements in Public Management

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

Public administrators have blurred the lines between the people, the private sector and the government. Only a few years ago, Collaborative Governance was regarded as a niche activity that was only practiced by a few in select sectors. Crossing organization, sector, and discipline boundaries, strategic collaboration is a valuable approach for public and nonprofit administrators as they seek to advance their agencies’ missions and to serve the best interests of the community at large. Strategic collaboration knowledge has several purposes. The first is to bring to the table the knowledge, ideas, and perspectives of a diverse set of participants for problem solving and policy making. The second purpose is to encourage students to move out of its status-quo-focused silos so that it can begin to identify and navigate the social, political, and economic hurdles of creative public problem solving. Third, strategic collaboration knowledge advances individual and organizational legitimacy while making progress on the targeted policy issue.

Course Learning Outcomes:

It provides students with a theoretically underpinned analytical perspective on CG and enabling them to critically assess Collaborative Governance issues, initiatives, drivers and responses. The course takes multi-sector and multi-disciplinary perspective. Collaborative Governance has become significant issues for a wide range of organizations and for the practitioners who work within them. Now it is a mainstream focus across all sectors of government, industries, spanning companies of all sizes.

Contents:

Unit I: Collaborative government: Meanings, Dimensions, Drivers and Outcomes

Unit II: The governance debate and the rise of Collaborative governance and Multilevel Governance (Horizontal, vertical, and diagonal governance)

Unit III: Linkages in Collaborative Governance - Collaborative Processes, Activity and Strategy

Unit IV: Political Dynamics of Collaboration (Power/politics and turning conflict into collaboration)

Unit V: Collaboration for Open Innovation Processes in Public Policy and Administrations

Unit VI: The Art of Collaboration – Rationales, Tasks and Tools
Unit VII: Collaborative Governance and Policy Design: Core Principles

Unit VIII: Collaboration with Citizens (Governance as civic enabler)

Unit IX: Models of Collaborative Governance- Galvanising government–non-profit/voluntary sector relations (collaborative network governance)

Unit X: Collaborative governance: The PPP phenomenon as collaboration

Unit XI: Indian case studies of Collaboration
   a. Collaboration in infrastructure development
   b. Collaboration in education sector
   c. Collaborating in health and sanitation
   d. Collaboration in sustainable development

Unit XII: The Future of Collaborative Governance and the Challenge of Collaboration.

PS-E 43: Corporate Citizenship and Governance: Theories and Practices

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

It is an innovative programme that highlights the global power and impact of corporations and their concomitant responsibilities. It aims to study the taxonomy of power and responsibilities of corporates or MNCs. The course examines the social, ethical and environmental issues faced in current model of development. A broad range of reasons underpin the increase in significance of this area of study, such as financial crisis (2008) high-profile corporate scandals; auditing Frauds; a growing need to demonstrate accountability, transparency and sustainability; a decreasing tolerance for corporate excess and irresponsibility; as well as the need to protect corporate reputation and to develop brand loyalty and competitive advantage. In India specially after the enactment of Companies Act 2013 Corporate Responsibility has become part of mandatory disclosure.

Course Learning Outcomes:

It provides students with a theoretically underpinned analytical perspective on Corporate Citizenship and enabling them to critically assess issues, initiatives, drivers and responses by government and corporates. The paper Corporate Citizenship and Governance is also designed to provide a broad understanding of Corporate Citizenship and governance. PS-E 47: Marx's politics: labour, equivalence, rights

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:
This course explores the pivotal role of Marx's labour theory of value for his notion of politics.
This first four sections of the course will focus on the relationship between the Marxist theory of value, the commodity-form and the question of rights. It will introduce students to the somewhat neglected field of Marxist critique not of capitalism but of democracy. The status of the rights-bearing citizen who is also a worker will be unpacked and analysed.

In the last three sections, we cover recent debates. The work of Jean-Luc Nancy and Alain Badiou will be an important point of reference. Both of them want to emphasise on Plato's notion of truth as an entry point to the critique of the conjunction between democracy and capitalism.

The last section will reflect on these themes in the light of the notion of the 'electorate', the process of elections and voting.

Course Learning Outcomes:
This course will enable students to see how the Marxist approach to politics is connected with Marx’s economics, in particular, the Marxist theory of value. It will help them connect the many dots between politics and economics and bring them up to date with theories of democracy, justice and rights within the critical Marxist tradition.

Contents:

Unit I. Early Marx: Freedom and alienation
Unit II. Sphere of exchange: Freedom and Equality
Unit III. The 'secret abode' of production: surplus value and futility of 'rights'
Unit IV. Marx’s value theory
Unit V. Jean Luc Nancy’s ‘communism of nonequivalence’
Unit VI. Badiou: Plato, truth and democracy
Unit VII. Electorate and the vote: demobilisation of the masses
Suggested Readings:

Marx:
   i) Selections from Capital and Grundisse
   ii) Critique of the Gotha Programme
   iii) Contribution to the Critique of Hegel’s Philosophy of Right
   iv) On the Jewish Question

PS-E 48: Politics and Psychoanalysis

Credits: 5

Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

Away from the focus on resistance and protest, this course will take us to the question of over-identification and surplus investment in the circuits of power, capital and the state. Starting from Freud’s notion of the unconscious and Lacan’s notion of the Real, we will arrive at recent theories of ideology and the gaze of the big Other. The post-structuralist critique of the Oedipal complex by those like Deleuze will also be studied. Colonialism and the big Other will be discussed with reference to Fanon. There is a section on ideology, the gaze and cinema.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course aims to equip students with the conceptual tools to relate the political and the social with the domain of the individual self, psyche - and, the Other. It will help students see the underlying psychic investments that constitute both the real-life domains of the political and the economic.

Contents:

Unit I. Why Psychoanalysis? Psychoanalysis and the Polis

Unit II. Freud’s unconscious and Lacanian Real

Unit III. Surplus value, surplus investment: over identification

Unit IV. Super-ego and the Law

Unit V. Ideological interpellation

Unit VI. Gaze and the Big Other: Colonialism?

PS-E 49: Political Theology Debates: Vedic and Buddhist

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:
This course will introduce students to a select few original texts. We will focus on the debates between Buddhist and Vedic philosophers, through a selective reading of Kumarila Bhatt, Vasubandhu, Nagarjuna and Adi Shankara. The debates revolve around questions of epistemology and cognition and their relation to the Dhamma/Dharma and politics. The convergence of sovereign power (cakravartin) and dhamma will be explored.

Course Learning Outcomes:
This will give students a small window to the richness of Indian philosophical debates and also give them some grasp over the key conceptual categories that are foundational to Indian thinking on morality and politics.

Contents:

Unit I. What is Dhamma/Dharma?

Unit II. Kumarila Bhatt: the poverty of perception or why Buddhism is not Dharma Unit III. Is perception always self-cognition? The Buddhist response

Unit IV. ‘Consciousness-only’ (vijnapti-matrata-siddhi) as a critique of realism

Unit V. Nagarjuna’s Sunyata and Nietzsche’s Nihilism

PS-E 50: Black Radical Tradition

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:
This course is designed to introduce students to new avenues in anti-colonial thought, in particular, the field of black radical thinking.

We will begin from Haiti since that is where the first successful black slave revolt takes place and a slave republic is founded in 1804. Taking place against the background of the French Revolution, we will see the subversion of the European idea of universal history. We will focus on the legacy of the maroons and Black Jacobins, with an emphasis on exploring the memory of African tradition in these revolts.

The last three sections will focus on the more familiar African American tradition. There are sections on African-American thought, Black Panther Party and black feminism.

There is a section on recent work on Hegel’s relation to Haiti.

Course Learning Outcomes:
The course will enable students to better appreciate the African or black influence on global history and thought through a concrete knowledge of slave uprisings.

Contents:
Unit I. 1492: Columbus lands in Haiti (Ayiti)
Unit II. Slavery: Macandal, the ‘Medical Revolutionary’ (1750)
Unit III. The maroon republic

PS-E 58: Power Transition and the Dynamics of Foreign Policy in International Relations

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

Power Transition has both a structural and a dynamic form. Structurally, it envisions global politics as composed of a hierarchy of nations with varying degrees of cooperation and competition. It specifies the relative roles of nations within this hierarchy, the system of governing rules, and then outlines how powerful countries attempt to manage global politics. This course shall introduce the theoretical foundations of power transition in international relations, and the changing nature of power relationships that led to the dynamic structure of international system. Further, the foreign policy implications for the major global and regional powers – the United States, Russia, China and the European Union shall be examined through the lens of power transition in establishing a multi polar international system.

Course Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the course, the student shall have a fair idea of power transition theory and would be able to analyze any foreign policy shifts, and altered structural arrangements caused by the changing power equations.

Contents:

Unit I: Structure, Power and International Order
a. Power Transition Theory in International Relations
b. Evolution of Countries into the Great Power Status
c. Power Predicament of Great Powers
e. Understanding International Systems: Bipolarity to Multipolarity

Unit II: Declining Hegemony and the Making of US Foreign Policy
a. Bipolarity and the Making of US hegemony
b. Cold War and the Making of United States’ Permanent War Economy
c. The End of US Hegemony: Towards Multipolarity
d. From Hegemony to Imperialism?
e. Iraq War and the Debates over American Power in the World
Unit III: From Ideological Romanticism to Economic Realism: Russian Foreign Policy in the Post-Cold War Era
a. Was Soviet Union an Empire?
b. Liberal Reforms and the Demise of the Soviet Union
c. The Crisis of the 1990s
d. Resurgent Russia and its Foreign policy
e. Towards Economic Realism

Unit IV: From Cultural Revolution to Market Socialism: Chinese Foreign Policy in a Globalized World
a. Century of Humiliation
b. Middle Kingdom Complex
c. Challenging US hegemony
d. Chinese Dream
e. Debating the “Peaceful” Rise of China

PS-E 60: ‘Worlding’ International Relations: Perspectives from the Global South

Credits: 5 Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course problematises the Euro-centric nature of International Relations (IR) as a discipline and explores alternate vantage points for understanding IR especially with contributions from the Global South. Explore the claim that there is little or no theoretical work produced in the Global South, and look at case studies of the way in which IR has developed and is practised in different parts of the world. The third part of the course will explore the different ways in which IR can be made more inclusive, as well as consider contributions by non-western scholars.

Course Learning Outcomes:

It will enable an understanding of the intellectual genesis and development of the field of IR; problematise the Euro-centric nature of the field and critically discuss the benefits of opening up the field to previously marginalised voices; illustrate familiarity with a range of non-western contributions to IR and develop the necessary skills to both write and speak about theoretical matters.

Contents:

Unit I: A Disciplinary Overview of the IR: Euro-centricism and its Critics

Unit II: Alternative Readings of IR
   a. Political and Cultural Origins of IR
   b. Sociology of Knowledge in IR
   c. Historicizing IR

Unit III: ‘Worlding’ Beyond the West
   a. Africa (Question of Race, Sovereignty and Ubuntu)
   b. Latin America (Dependency School)
   c. China & East Asia (Tributary system, Confucianism)
   d. Middle East/West Asia
   e. Russia & Eastern Europe
   f. India

PS-E 61: Islam and International Relations

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:
This paper introduces masters students to the multi-layered and multi-faceted theoretical, conceptual and philosophical issues that act as road maps when we attempt at understanding the linkages between the history, culture and theology of Islam and the structuration processes that are involved in the functioning of international relations. The course explains as to how in recent times, the genealogy and archeology of the religious and political thought in Islam and its connection with the systemic contours of societies and political institutions has emerged to be one of the most contested subjects in humanities and social sciences. The course then lays out as to how such an interest has been the product of the radicalization of political Islam and the growing unhealthy interface that has developed between Islam and violence, as a result of the globalization of Jihad that has brought in the medieval notions of a contest between abode of Islam (Dar al-Islam) and the land of unbelievers (Dar al-harb). Owing to this, Islam has become a prominent element in the sphere of security studies. On this count, the study of Islam becomes very crucial for the students of International Relations.

Course Learning Outcomes:
By the end of the course, the students are expected to understand the emerging linkages that are getting forged between the theological, ideological and popular dimensions of the religion of Islam and the working of contemporary international relations. They are supposed to get a theoretical understanding as to how public religion and international relations tend to meet and produce profound consequences on the nature and functioning of the contemporary world order. Most significantly, the students are expected to comprehend as to how the notion of Islamophobia has become an integral part of contemporary global affairs and they should also understand as to how Islam as a religion has been misrepresented in the sphere of international politics.

Contents:

Unit I: Islam: Genealogies and Contemporary dimensions
   a. Islam: From Prophethood to Imperialism
   b. Islam's encounter with colonialism and modernity
   c. Islam and the postcolonial predicament.

Unit II: Islam and International Relations: Some Conceptual Issues
   a. Islam and the Theorizing of the Phenomenon of International
   b. Islamism, Political Islam and International Relations
   c. Islamic Conception of the State and the Future of the Westphalian Order Unit III: Islam and the West
   a. Orientalism and the Western interpretation of Islam
   b. Reverse orientalism and the Making of the Islamic discourse on the West
   c. Islam and the West after 9/11.

Unit IV: Islam and the Question of transnational terrorism
   a. From near enemy to the far enemy.
   b. Wahhabism, petrodollar Islam and the globalisation of transnational jihad.
   c. The United States, the military industrial complex and Islamic extremism.
   d. The Afghanistan war and the making of the Al-Qaeda.
   e. Iraq war and the making of the ISIS.

PS-E 62: International Relations of South Asia

Credits: 5  Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objective

International relations of South Asia are based on the study of South Asia as a region. The course will consider a number of conceptual and policies’ questions and explore how the South Asian region has been transforming with the globalization of its economy, the resurgent ethnic conflicts, situated in a nuclearized security environment and the ever deepening and rapidly pervading connections with the global and local extremism and terrorism. The students will then be introduced to international relations theories and discuss their applicability to understand various strands of South Asian dynamics. Further, the course will cover a broad spectrum of security issues wherein focus is on the conflict between India and Pakistan; nuclear proliferation in the region; the spread of transnational terrorist forces; left wing insurgency and ethno-nationalistic conflicts. Besides, major issues and prospects involved in regional cooperation will also be discussed. Additionally, aspects relating to democratization, development, energy security and environmental concerns will also be dealt with. So, keeping in view the nature of South Asia’s engagement with the complex global dynamics, the course attempts at touching upon the broad contours, which have shaped the diverse spectrum of international relations scholarship pertaining to the region.

Course Learning Outcome

By the end of the course, the students would have gained a fair understanding of the various theories of International relations and explore the myriad ways in which various issues pertaining to South Asia may be viewed through these theoretical lenses. The students would further be able to gauge the implications of such issues for the regional and global environments.

Contents:

Unit I: Historicising and Defining the Concept of South Asia and its Understanding as a region
   a) The Origins and nature of South Asian States.
   b) Socio-Cultural Structures and the Post-colonial challenges of State construction and nation-building.

Unit II: Theorizing the “International” in South Asia
   a) Limits of Structural realism and South Asian security.
   b) Deterrence theory and Nuclearization of South Asia.

Unit III: Conflict and Cooperation in South Asia
   a) Borders and Boundaries: Security Challenges
   b) Internal Conflict and Porous Borders
c) Peace Processes and Confidence Building Measures (CBMs) in South Asia
   SAARC as a regional organization

Unit IV: Contemporary Issues in South Asia
   a) Democratization and the Crises of Governance.
   b) Migration, Refugee problems and their impact on peace, stability and development.
   c) Human development.
   d) Issues involved in sharing of water.
   e) Issues of climate change.
   f) Search for energy security

Course Structure:

Unit I: Historicising and Defining the Concept of South Asia and its Understanding as a region:

Unit description

In this unit, we will examine as to why is it important to study South Asia as a region and understand the geopolitics of South Asia. The unit introduces the students to the history and politics of the region, and examines the politico-economic, socio-cultural, historical and systemic roots of the several problems confronting the countries of the region. The endemic problems of South Asia and the tendency of the region’s countries to use violence to resolve conflicts must be placed within the domestic, historical and international context in which the region is situated.

In view of this, this unit considers major political changes in South Asia from a range of analytical perspectives. Colonial rule, the subcontinental divide, nationalism and the formation of the region's postcolonial nation-states and the post-colonial politics of the region will be discussed.

1. The Origins and nature of South Asian States.
2. Socio-Cultural Structures and the Post-colonial challenges of State construction and nation-building.

Required Readings:

Recommended Readings:

Unit II: Theorizing the “International” in South Asia

Unit description

This unit primarily deals with the question as to how we can use the theories of international relations to understand security issues, State structure and governance, and conflict and cooperation in South Asia. As regards international relations itself, it is a young discipline in South Asia and the region’s contribution towards the mainstream disciplinary evolution has also been minimal. Scholars from the region have largely attempted at interpreting South Asian dynamics from the perspective of West generated discourses. So, the study of the epistemic foundations of IR theory in South Asia still remains unexplored. In the light of this lacuna and the dominance of the Euro-American centric theories in the study of IR, this unit intends to discuss the extent to which IR theories are able to explain the complex and idiosyncratic character of South Asian dynamics. The aim here would also be to understand certain non-Western alternative explanations advanced towards understanding the key issues involved in the study of international relations of South Asia. Significant in this regard are Mohammed Ayoob’s conception of subaltern realism and the notions of reverse and subaltern globalization.

1. Limits of Structural realism and South Asian security.
2. Deterrence theory and Nuclearization of South Asia.

Required Readings:

Recommended Readings:

Unit III: Conflict and Cooperation in South Asia

Unit description

The purpose of this unit is to examine the nature of conflict and cooperation in South Asia. The security environment of the region is complex, owing to the nuclearisation of the region, the unrelenting acts of various forms of extremism and terrorism, ranging from the radicalization of political Islam, left wing insurgency and several secessionist movements. The region is home to some of the fiercest conflicts such as Kashmir and Afghanistan that have serious global ramifications. Finally, this unit will take up the violent conflicts confronting the smaller states of South Asia, especially the Maoist insurgency in Nepal and ethnic conflict (and peace process) in Sri Lanka. In addition to this, this unit aims at understanding the problems and prospects for peace building and regional cooperation in South Asia. Emphasis in this regard would be towards assessing the role and relevance of SAARC as a regional organization.

1. Borders and Boundaries : Security Challenges

2. Internal Conflict and Porous Borders
3. Peace Processes and Confidence Building Measures (CBMs) in South Asia

4. SAARC as a regional organization

Required Readings:

Singh, Deepak K. (2010), The Stateless in South Asia: The Chakmas Between Bangladesh and India. New Delhi: Sage India Pvt Ltd.

Recommended Readings:

Unit IV: Contemporary Issues in South Asia

Unit description
Developing countries face several challenges while formulating and implementing their developmental agenda. Besides confronting diverse transnational challenges such as environmental concerns, migration, the refugee problem, perils such as terrorism, international organized crime and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, they face internal structural constraints pertaining to the maintenance of stability of their governance structures, State construction and nation-building. Most significantly, many of these countries are still in the process of modernization and democratization and this epoch of transition is characterized by a volatile socio-political environment. With this conceptual background, this unit aims at discussing certain pressing contemporary issues that directly and indirectly have affected the security, stability and development of the region.

1. Democratization and the Crises of Governance.
2. Migration, Refugee problems and their impact on peace, stability and development.
3. Human development.
4. Issues involved in sharing of water.
5. Issues of climate change.

PS-E 64: China’s Role in Contemporary World

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

The rise of China has impacted world politics and economy in significant ways. How did it happen? This course introduces unique angles of understanding the making of contemporary China and provides critical analysis of its politics, economy and strategy of engagements with rest of the world.

This course includes an intensive introduction to the making of China’s World View. While seeking to enable engagement with current events, it also explores how China came to be in its current circumstances, the different ways that these can be interpreted, and the interconnections between the making of China’s ‘domestic’ circumstances and its ‘international’ role.

The readings cover a wide selection of contemporary Chinese writings in these areas with emphasis on the interplays of history, politics and economics. This course pays close attention to the role of global finance, the mediating powers of technology and the emergence of critical regional consciousness in response to changing world politics. The course is aimed at developing critical reading skills and gain in-depth understanding of contemporary China and its engagements with the world beyond the Cold War rhetoric.

Course Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, the students will be able to understand the key concepts used in studying China’s role in contemporary world; demonstrate familiarity with some of the major theories and historical trajectory used to explain contemporary China’s world view; critically assess and engage in current debates about China’s emerging role and attain a foundation for further, more advanced study or policy engagement with China.

PS-E 66: North America in Comparative Perspective

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

American and Canadian Politics were well represented in the academic realm since the beginning. However, with the expansion of research, the studies have acquired a transnational turn as issues have moved beyond traditional parameters of analysis. Following the same, the paper seeks to explore the nuances of political dynamics in three nations- USA, Canada and Mexico.

Course Learning Outcomes:

The syllabus is designed in a way to acquaint the students with contours of establishment, evolution and contemporary trends in North American continent. Three North American countries- US, Canada, Mexico are federal in terms of their political apparatus and have processes in society which make for linkages that have remarkable insights for a comparative study.

Contents:

Unit I: Situating North America in Comparative Political Analysis

Unit II: Governing Structures in North America

PS-E 70: Key Texts In Political Philosophy

Credits: 5
Duration: 5 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

The objective of this course is to introduce students to select classical texts in Western Political Philosophy through two methods (i) an intensive reading of selected parts of the text, and (ii) by making them familiar with different interpretations of the texts. The idea is to instil in students an interest in reading original works, in the desire to closely follow the debates around the work, and become aware of the different ways in which a text can be read.

A detailed study of any four texts from the given list will be offered in an academic session.

Course Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the course students would be able to:

• Understand how to read and decode the classics and use them to solve contemporary socio-political problems.
• Connect with historically written texts and can interpret it in familiar way (the way Philosophers think).
• Clearly present their own arguments and thoughts about contemporary issues and develop ideas to solve them through logical validation.

PS-OE 01: Ethics and Governance

Credits: 4

Course Objectives:

The question on why and how must we, the modern citizens, attribute moral values to collective actors assumes deep significance for students of social sciences, especially for those who study politics. The question today assumes all the more significance given the fact that the scope and nature of governance has become wider and more complex. With the emergence of new technologies and the new ethical dilemmas they pose, the tasks of governance have become more challenging than before. The course will shed light on the changing dynamics in the relationship between ethics and governance.

Course Learning Outcomes:

The course will allow students to reflect on some real world ethical questions and equip them with the analytical and critical skills necessary to enrich their ethical decision-making abilities and the demands on leadership in the public domain.

Course Contents:

Unit I: Ethics in Public Life and Institutions: The Morality of Affect, Ethical Reasoning and Political Responsibility

Unit II: Ethical Decision-Making and Professional Expertise

Unit III: Leadership Ethics

Unit IV: The Values of Transparency, Privacy, Security and Accountability: A Case Study of Whistleblowing

Unit V: Emerging Ethical Dilemmas and Policy Issues in Science and Technology

PS-OE 02: Understanding the International

Credits: 4 Duration: 4 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course aims at inculcating a foundational understanding of the phenomenon of international among the students. As we live in a complex world that is characterized by an intricate interconnectedness, the necessity of understanding the multilayered and multifaceted dimensions of this world ranging from the political, economic, geographic and cultural dimensions becomes an imperative. Keeping this in mind, the proposed course seeks to teach the students the basic elements that constitute as the structural-functional foundations of our modern world. The course intends to do this by situating the conceptualization of the world from the perspective of the notion of the international. Grounding ourselves from the vantage point of political science, this course seeks to explain the meaning and nature of the current world from the perspective of socio-economic and cultural aspects. In this manner, it tends to offer an interdisciplinary understanding of the phenomenon of the international.

Course Learning Outcomes:

By the end of the course, the students are expected to achieve a basic understanding of the world in which we live today from a politico-economic, geographic and socio-cultural perspective. The students are expected to be in a position to make sense of the structural and ideational drivers that determine the fundamental contours underpinning the workings of our world.

PS-OE 04: Gender Studies

Credits: 4  Duration: 4 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

The course would begin with understanding gender, sexuality and patriarchy. The first two themes discuss how patriarchy is institutionalized through marriage, family and other social institutions. The following sections would familiarize the students with the ramifications of gender hierarchies in various spheres of life such as politics, law, development, caste, refugee.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course on gender studies will open up the structural and institutional basis of patriarchy as well as establish that gender identity and gender injustice cannot be understood in isolation, but only with reference to caste, class and religious community identities. Gender itself is not a synonym for ‘women’. It enables rather, an understanding that the identities of ‘men’ and ‘women’ are constructed historically and culturally.

Facilitating the achievement of Course Learning Outcomes:

The Department deploys multiple methods to evaluate the program outcomes alongside the stipulated requirements of the university of having internal assessments and end-semester exams.

- The teachers use varied pedagogical techniques including class projects (in individual and group mode), term papers, class presentations and field research to create a participative learning environment in the classes.
- The communication and analytical skills of students are evaluated through regular class presentations and group discussions.

Semester II

PS-OE 09: Research Methods in Political Science

Credits: 4
Duration: 4 hrs./week

Course Objectives:

This course will introduce students to understand the fundamental process of doing research in the social sciences, with special reference to tools they are likely to use in Political Science. It will position it such that a student can go from a common-sense understanding to a complex, conceptual one. The student will also have a sense of hands-on training, by undertaking some limited research idea, with an appropriate methodology and write a report on it. This will constitute the internal assessment requirement. The faculty offering the course will provide a list of ideas for a short, doable research, along with a guide to the literature and proposed methodology, from which the students may choose.

Course Learning Outcomes:

All students will be expected to start with a research question and work their way through the course with the teacher. This will enable them to work toward the preparation of a rough research proposal. The logic of research methods should be unraveled, such that the intimidation that students suffer from it, be overcome once and for all.

Contents:

Unit I: The purpose of research: good social science research; types of research done in Political Science

Unit II: Asking a good question:
   a) From a hunch to a researchable question
   b) Literature review: the purpose and method
   c) Formulating a clear and precise question
   d) Hypothesis: variables, relationships, definitions

Unit III: Ways of answering the question:
   a) Principles of research design
   b) Types of research designs
      i. Experimental, non-experimental and quasi-experimental
      ii. Cross-sectional and longitudinal
      iii. Comparative: case study, small-N and large-N

Unit IV: Means of gathering information:
a) Aggregate data
b) Sample Surveys
c) Focused Group Discussion
d) Ethnography
e) Textual, including archival sources

Unit V: Analysing the information:
a) Quantitative analysis
b) Analysing interviews
c) Reading and interpreting a text

Unit VI: Writing research findings:
a) Clarity and precision
b) Structuring and chapterisation
c) Referencing and citation
d) Ethical practices and plagiarism

Unit VII: Expectations of social science research:
a) What: Nature of social facts
b) How: Can or should we be value neutral?
c) Why: Understanding, causal explanation, prediction, policy prescription

Semester II

PS-OE 10: Digital/Social Media and New Public

Credits: 4 Duration: 4 hrs./week

Course Objective

This course will introduce students to the function of the sign, image, network and, more generally, digital media and the spectacle in present day society. The consumer who is also a content-generating 'producer' marks a shift in the culture of work, labour and socialisation. These have redefined the relationship between the private and the public, media representation and 'truth' or 'facts'. We will explore how this produces a new public and a new culture and politics.

Course Learning Outcomes:

This course will equip students to critically approach the themes of popular digital culture and media society. Rigorous concepts will allow them to see what is new and what is not new in the ever-changing present of the network society.

Contents:

Unit I: Theory of signs: image, the spectacle and the ‘end of the social’

Unit II: Immaterial labour, affective labour

Unit III: Networks without a cause: social media

Unit IV: Consumer to prosumer

Unit V: Post-truth, trolls

Unit VI: The private and the public

Unit VII: New public, new politics

Suggested Readings:

Roberto Orsi, The Politics of Post-Truth, LSE (blogs.lse.ac.uk/eurocrisispress/2017/05/05/the-politics-of-post-truth/)

Oscar Wilde, 'The Fisherman who lost his soul'.

Semester IV

PS-Skill 401: Applied Political Science

Credits: 2
Duration: 2 hrs.

Course Objectives:

This is a practice-oriented rather than a text-oriented course. It is built around a series of graded exercises in academic reading, writing and formal presentation. This course will expose students to the new learning tools of exploring research in the discipline of Political Science. The student will also have a sense of hands-on training, by undertaking some limited research idea, and experiment the same through field study.

Course Learning Outcomes:

Developing skills in academic reading, writing and formal presentation. All students will be expected to start with a research question and work their way through the course with the teacher. This will enable them to underline the scientific orientation in the research and its applicability in solving problems as part of policy research.

Contents:

Unit I: How to Write a Paper: Central Question, Secondary Questions, Hypothesis, Literature Review, Book Review and Referencing

Unit II: Field Research: Survey, Sampling and Interview

Unit III: Ethics and Plagirism
